3) The Electoral System and the Opportunity to Change that System

Wellington City Council currently elects its members under the Single Transferable Voting (STV) system. Under this system electors rank candidates in their order of preference. The number of votes needed for a candidate to be elected (called the quota) depends on the number of positions to be filled and the number of valid votes cast. The election of candidates to fill all vacancies is achieved first by the counting of first preferences, then by a transfer of a proportion of votes received by any candidate where the number of votes for that candidate is in excess of the quota, and then if not all vacancies have been filled by the exclusion of the lowest polling candidates and the transfer of these votes in accordance with the voters' second preferences.

Under the Local Electoral Act 2001 a Council can resolve to change the electoral system it uses to elect its members or can conduct a binding poll on the question. Alternatively, 5% of electors can initiate the holding of a poll by signing a petition demanding that a poll be held. If a poll of electors is held to determine the electoral system to be used, the system that is chosen cannot be changed for at least the next two triennial general elections, i.e. if a poll has been held on the issue a council cannot change its electoral system for one election and then change back to the previous system for the next election.

The Wellington City Council resolved to hold a poll of electors on this issue in November 2002. The result of this poll was in favour of changing the electoral system from the First Past the Post (FPP) to the STV voting method. The 2004 and 2007 local authority elections in Wellington City were therefore held under the STV system. The Council held another poll in September 2008 the result of which was in favour of retaining the STV system. The 2010 triennial general election was held using the STV method as will the election in 2013. Following the 2013 election the council will have the option of choosing which system it wishes to use for the 2016 and subsequent elections.
